STORM!

No matter what the elements decree your CPL electric service must be good!

"Hundreds of us CPL folks are ready to go, day or night, when emergencies which threaten your electric service arise. It takes an alert, strong organization to meet these emergencies."

November, 1940, brought the Texas Panhandle its severest ice storm within the memory of man.

Transportation and communication were paralyzed. Electric lines were weighted down with layers of ice. Electric service was out like a blackout.

Before the storm began to subside, however, Electric Servicemen employed by the privately operated concern serving the affected territory got busy! Service crews from neighboring companies—some as far away as Colorado—were rushed to the scene. Day and night, they worked like Trojans to restore service with utmost speed—and did so!

... Similar storms can and do occur in South and Southwest Texas. When they do, Central Power and Light Company dispatches its traveling service crews to the scene of need immediately. Large CPL warehouses are drawn upon for materials and supplies. The entire CPL organization is brought into play to restore service and restore it rapidly.

Had Amarillo depended on a small, isolated plant, the people of that community might have waited weeks for complete renewal of service. There's a great advantage in being served by an electric company that's large enough and alert enough to do the job—whose employees gladly become "Soldiers of the Storm" when the storm comes.
