Blackcat*

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased from 1.1 billion to 1.3 billion. The number of people aged 15 years and over has increased from 3.5 billion to 4.5 billion. The number of people aged 65 years and over has increased from 0.2 billion to 0.5 billion.

There are a number of reasons why the world population is increasing. One of the main reasons is that the number of people who are surviving to old age is increasing. This is due to a number of factors, including improved medical care, better nutrition, and a decline in infant mortality.

Another reason why the world population is increasing is that the number of people who are having children is increasing. This is due to a number of factors, including a decline in the age at which people are having children, and a decline in the number of children who are dying in infancy.

There are a number of other reasons why the world population is increasing, including a decline in the number of people who are migrating to other countries, and a decline in the number of people who are dying from natural disasters.

The world population is increasing at a rapid rate, and this is likely to continue for many years to come. This is a major challenge for the world, as it will require a significant increase in resources to support the growing population.

There are a number of ways in which the world population can be managed. One way is to increase the number of people who are having children, and another way is to decrease the number of people who are having children.
